I think it seems pretty balanced.

Nick is frontend view stuff, Sapna is backend stuff, and I'm middleend glue stuff, connecting everything together. Basically, Nick creates the skeleton like what we get when we're given labs and probably does some research on widgets, Sapna does database, data storage, and maybe some deeper android stuff like with Camera Intent to take pictures, and I put all of that together. Writing button code to go between and create/destroy activities/fragments, and ListView stuff to show listings.
